Kashumanu yet from the intensely combustible nature of the materials out of which the conflagration was u. vox made, it swept with resistless fury and as if by away, in the above brief space.

Not only the amount of property destroyed, but the loss to many of our most worthy citizens is irreparable, men whose all lay in the burnt district and who had a mere trifle if any insurance. These sufferers have the fullest sympathy of the community and will receive, we doubt not, substantial aid to enable them to recruit their shattered fortunes.

The burnt district presented one of the most singular spectacles this morning possible. A great portion of the area was literally covered General Commission Agents, and Ship Chandlers, Honolulu 195-tr with the hoops of the oil casks, as if a mower had come in with his seythe and cut down an iron harvest,—the oil which the casks held was running down in the gutters with a man stationed in the drain to bail it out as it came along. The wharves, streets, side walks, were one color and covered with one substance —oil: men were and covered with one substance —oil: men were bailing up the commodity from the dock and oilcasks were floating in the water.

The disastrous event should point one truth and that is the unsecurity of wooden buildings in any district where oil is stored. If the wind T. MOSSMAN. is high and the oil is once on fire, nothing can Bakers, Grocers and Dealers in Dry Goods, Nucanu street, Hon possibly stop the flames, and a substance of this character should not be exposed to the possible accidents arising from the firing of wooden structures near it, or in that portion of the city where the shipping and the oil must be placed. In former times, when the city was smaller less provision was made in this respect—at present, Commission Merchants—Fire-Proof Buildings, Queen street. it is essential that some further security be adopt-
